New free legal advice service for PetQuip and Gardenex members

Member companies of PetQuip and Gardenex can benefit from a further extension of the services offered by the federation. The latest service allows members to access free telephone legal advice about business issues such as employment law, contract and company law, marketing law, taxation and health and safety.

Introducing the new service, the federation's director general Amanda Sizer Barrett said "The federation is continually researching ways of assisting its members to run their businesses efficiently. While many of our services are export orientated, the new legal advice system will help in the overall day-to-day running of their businesses as well as in export matters. The service will particularly benefit the many SMEs that are in membership of PetQuip and Gardenex".

The new service is being provided by Law Express, the UK's leading telephone legal advice specialist whose clients include the Institute of Directors, the Institute of Healthcare Management, the Institute of Marketing, the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development, the John Lewis Partnership and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The legal advisers at Law Express supply business owners, directors and managers with expert, impartial, practical information on the legal, compliance, employment and taxation issues affecting their organisations. They can also advise on personal legal issues including family, property, wills and probate, personal injury, motoring, property and employment law.

PetQuip and Gardenex are divisions of The Federation of Garden and Leisure Manufacturers Ltd, the trade association that works on behalf of British companies to help its members increase sales worldwide.
